Slate.org FAQs for Secondary Schools

What is Slate.org?

Slate.org is a free tool for school counselors to check on applicant statuses throughout the admission process. Slate.org also allows counselors to conveniently and securely upload application-related materials directly onto a student's application.

How is The University of Scranton planning to use Slate.org?

For the 2020 application cycle, we hope Slate.org will be a helpful tool for you to upload documents and track your applicants and their decisions. Slate will allow us to convey a student's decision to you after it has been released to the student.

How do I register for Slate.org?

Visit Slate.org and click the registration link in the main tool bar. If you experience issues registering, contact Slate.org at info@slate.org.

How do permissions work?

One member of your school will be designated to manage permissions. Click here for an overview of how to get started. If you have previously submitted documents through the Common Application, you are pre-approved to have a Slate.org account.

Which documents can I upload?

You can upload all transcripts, letters of recommendation, school reports and test scores.

Why would I use Slate.org if my school is already using Naviance or another platform to submit documents?

It is our strong preference to receive documents electronically, whether through Common Application, Naviance, Parchment or another platform. Even if you typically use one of these options, there may be times you find a need to submit a corrected transcript or other non-standard document. Slate.org is simply another option and a great way to submit information securely and directly onto a student's record.

What if I do not see a student listed under your college in Slate.org?

If a student is not listed as an applicant to our school, it means that an application has not yet been received by our office. We receive newly-submitted Common Applications once a day in the morning.

Who do I contact if I have technical issues?

Contact Slate.org at info@slate.org.
