US.

While we come from different backgrounds and each see the world differently, we share a belief that every one of us has the power and the potential to create a healthier, greener, fairer, kinder world. We learn how to forge our own path and find our own, distinct way. Because it's what we have in common that makes The University of Scranton so uncommon.

BEST IS OUR NORM

Ranked among America's best colleges for more than 30 years, with so many Best, Most and Top ranked programs and advantages, it's truly hard to keep track. But the moment you step on campus, you can feel why "best of" is our norm. And when you come here, you experience those bests for yourself.

Best Overall

For 23 years straight, Scranton has made The Princeton Review's Best Colleges list. For 16 years running, Forbes has named Scranton one of America's Top Colleges. The Wall Street Journal ranks Scranton among its 2025 Best Colleges in the U.S. and recognizes the University for its impact on graduation rates and graduates' salaries.

Paul A. Datti, Ph.D., CRC, HS-BCP

Professor and Director, Counseling and Human Services Program

With each aspect of my teaching, I consider and respect each student and tailor the classes to them. What is important for them to learn? How can I help them learn, considering that many have different learning styles? How do I ensure that my classroom is as inclusive as possible? And might I make it a little bit fun for them?”

“I have the pleasure of writing many recommendation letters and hearing wonderful news about my students getting into their grad school of choice or landing meaningful jobs. And because we get to know our students, I hear from them throughout their lives. The Jesuits were onto something with their idea of ‘caring for the whole person.’”

Renée Hakim, PT, Ph.D., NCS emeritus

Chairperson, Program Director
Department of Physical Therapy

I believe that faculty are important role models as we advise and mentor our students. This includes ‘care for the whole person’ with support for not only academic performance, but also other areas of wellness.”

A Scranton education leads to standout graduates because each student’s unique aspirations, intelligence and humanity are sparked and tended in the best of ways. No doubt what contributes to our recognition for excellence is the care we take with every student. It’s a whole-person approach to teaching and advising that means you are really seen, known, understood and valued for the person you are.

Cura Personalis

A hallmark of our Jesuit education is our core value of cura personalis—respect for the uniqueness of each individual.

The Greenhouse Project

(PICTURED)

Through education, wholesome food and healthy active living, the goal is to educate children and adults about horticulture, health, preventing disease through diet, and locally grown food.

F.I.R.S.T.

(FIRST-YEARS INVOLVED IN REFLECTIVE SERVICE TOGETHER)

First-year students participate in five days of service in the Scranton community immediately preceding Fall Welcome.

Take Back the Night

Annual global rally against interpersonal violence and sexual assault with The Clothesline Project displaying shirts created over a number of years expressing such experiences.

Lackawanna River Conservation

Field opportunities include river, trail and conservancy preserve stewardship, native plant rescue and more.

Friends of the Poor

Help with food pantries, furniture giveaways, sorting and distributing clothing, children's programming and senior living.

Domestic & International Service Trips

From Arizona and California to Belize and Ecuador, service projects focus on food, shelter, medical care, disaster relief, tutoring and mentoring children, refugee assistance and working with persons with disabilities.

Make It Happen

You'll belong to a community that's working to create a healthier, greener, fairer and kinder world—not someday, but now.

We welcome, energize and inspire people of all faiths and none to go forth and act as if the world's wellbeing depends on each of us. It's a commitment that comes directly from our Jesuit values.

So, whatever your "it" is—Scranton is a place that will build your own unique power to engage the world and help change it for the better. Listed above is a small sampling of the hundreds of service efforts students are involved in.

The Friendly ROYALS

→ Asked to sum up the Scranton community in one word, these Royals said:

No Crowns Needed Because everyone is equally valued, and each person's success grows because of that. What's king at Scranton are relationships—from the friends you really will have forever to the professors who attend your games, plays and concerts, to the dining staff who make your favorite foods, to the alumni helping you with internships and jobs.

Electric Destination

There's a reason Scranton is ranked as one of the "Top 25 Colleges Students Love."^{*} With an eclectic mix of historic architecture and more than $350 million in new campus facilities, Scranton is university life the way you always pictured it. It's a dream campus—safe and self-contained but literally across the street from a charming, walkable downtown with cafés, shops and parks bordered by the Lackawanna River Heritage Trail for hiking and biking. Scranton's nickname is "The Electric City," but it's the whole region that is electric with opportunities, from outdoor adventure to culture, internships and jobs and all that New York City and Philadelphia—just two hours away—have to offer.

^{*} THE PRINCETON REVIEW

Surrounded by Creativity

Students from all academic areas create and enjoy visual and performing arts here, including Performance Music, The Aquinas (newspaper), Esprit (literary magazine), University Players, Liva Arts Company, A Cappella and dance.

#25 Best Food

We've said it before, but it bears repeating because good food can't help but make you feel more at home. The Princeton Review places Scranton among the best of the best.

Springfest Is an annual festival that features live music, battle of the bands, games, food and fundraisers.

Welcome to Chapman Lake

Student retreats are held several times a year at our beautiful Retreat Center 12 miles from campus.

Students participate in instrumental and choral performing ensemble opportunities each year.

Comfort, Connection &

BELONGING

Scranton has such high retention and graduation rates because this is a campus where students want to be. Named among the friendliest and healthiest universities, with dining and residence halls ranked among the best in the nation, no matter where you're from, there's a feeling of belonging and comfort here.

Housing Guaranteed

Ranging from traditional residences for first-year students, to suite-style housing for sophomores, to apartments for juniors and seniors, housing is guaranteed for four consecutive years. PLUS—light housekeeping is included for the first two years.

Multicultural Center

Explore and celebrate the diverse identities and perspectives of students' cultural backgrounds.

Be Well

Our Center for Health Education and Wellness (CHEW) promotes a healthier campus community by offering physical wellness programs like yoga and fitness classes, and emotional wellness initiatives focusing on stress, work-life balance and self-care.

168,000 Service Hours

Volunteered by Scranton students locally, nationally and globally each year.

No Opportunity Too Big for a Scranton

GRAD

Here's what our graduates find: Wherever they go in their professional lives, in graduate school, in their communities, no opportunity feels too big to go after. No challenge is too overwhelming because from the start they learn to work, lead and serve well with others. They know they've gained the ethical foundation, knowledge, hands-on experience and skills to hold their own.
