Thank you for your interest in The University of Scranton, and welcome to Open House! The fact that you’ve chosen to come to campus today means that you’ve taken yet another important step in the college search process. I’m thrilled that the University is part of this exciting time in your lives.

Here at Scranton, our Catholic and Jesuit mission and our pastoral care of students are a central and shared responsibility. Student success is a result of our strong liberal arts tradition, emphasizing the importance of cura personalis or care for each person as a unique individual. It’s with this in mind that we are increasing the various ways that we support students. We’ve also added new majors, from mechanical engineering to business analytics, and opened the Gail and Francis Slattery Center for Humanities.

As you prepare for the transition to college I want to assure you that, as I’ve learned during my years as University president, change can be good; it is likely why The Princeton Review ranked Scranton among the top 20 “best-run colleges,” and U.S. News & World Report ranked us among the nation’s “most innovative schools” for 2020 and consistently ranks us No. 6 in the North and a “best value” school.

I think you’ll find that there is a spirit of hard work and a tight-knit community here at Scranton on which you can rely. I invite you to experience it for yourselves today.

Scott R. Pilarz, S.J.
President
